Jules Verne has a Vision. M. Jules Verne has been speculating as to what will be the daily life of people 1,000 years hence, says the Fall Mall Budget. As science extends her dominion it is noticeable how increasing'y ambitious such forecasts become. Nothing will satisfy M. Verne tut serial trains traveling at the rate of 625 miles an hour; a transatiantic tobular service, conveying the traveler from London to New York in 195 minutes; a "telephote" which enables people in different hemispheres to dine with each other, or at least to see and converse with each other while eating, and secondulators for condensing and radiating at will the sun's raye. Such are the advantages to be enjoyed by the inhabitants of a certain city cyled 'Universal City,' the capital of the United States in the year of grace 2891. England by that time will, according to M. Verne, have become a province of the United States.

The public will be kept informed of the latest political developments, not only upon the terrestrial globe, but upon Jupiter, Mars and Venue. Not that they will read newspapers. The newspapers of the day will be epoken. Billiant, descriptive writers will be retained to speak through the telephone to millions of subscribers, and daily installments of novels to be continued to-morrow morning will be given by popular authors Man is to be fed on the choicest viands, laid on as New tiver water is at pre-set, and it will be sufficient to step into a toller cabinet to be tubbed, shaved, dressed and brushed to be thoused, shaved, dressed and brushed in the space of two minute. Even a new digestive apparatus, "warranted for two years," will be obtainable. But one thing we, or rather our posterity, are told not to A certain D .. Faithburn's experiment in freezing his own body and causing himself to be kept for 100 years turns out a complete failure, so absolute'y does he refuse to be resuscitated.

A One-Eved Bride

A marriage ceremony occurred at the Swedish Mission yesterday under somewhat peculiar circumstances, says the New York Recorder. The bride has only one eye and the groum married her because he was responsible for that fact. Incidentally the cauple evinced much affection each for the Martin Gephart and Victoria Schevach were playmates in their native town, Fischa, in Austria, not far from Vienna. He is now twenty-eight and she is twenty-four. A little less than two years ago he decided to come to America. The night previous to his departure a farewell party was given.

Martin and Victoria had joined others in a game of cards, and during its progress he accidentally struck her in the right eye so sharply with one of the cards as to destroy

A supersition preval's among many Germans that if an unmarried man destroy one or both eyes of an unmarried woman he must marry her if he would escape a life of misfortune.

The pair corresponded regularly afterward. Martin became the possessor of a email farm near Southborough, Mass, and a short time ago sent Victoria passage money. She arrived on the Westernland and vesterday morning she and Martin, who had come on from Boston, were married by Pestor Burgemeyer. Later they departed for their Massachusetts home.
